Bobcat Build 2014

Annual community event that encourages people to complete hundreds of service projects in San Marcos as a way of saying “thank you” for the community’s continued support of the university.

PRSSA participated last year with approx. 3,400 total volunteers that serviced 168 jobsites.

“Participating in last year’s Bobcat Build was really great,” said 2013 participant Allie Horton, “it was amazing to know that you were part of the largest community service project in the state of Texas.”

Welcome to PRSSA

Stephania Ortega, a senior at Texas State University, is a public relations major with a business administration minor. Having several professional experiences, including being part of the 2013 Multicultural Intern Program (MAIP), she is ready to advance Texas State’s PRSSA chapter by being chapter president.

Her mission for this semester is simple: help students see the many different sectors of public relations.

“PRSSA is so great and I want members to see the different career paths they can take all while advancing the field of public relations!” Stephania said.

She aims for a semester of fun activities but also informative meetings with industry professionals. She hopes this semester will provide members with a solid understanding of what PRSSA is and does. Members are encouraged to consider running for an officer position.

2014 National Assembly

Each year, the PRSSA National Assembly gathers to make influential, long-term decisions about the future of the society, elect a new National Committee and review the bylaws. This year’s event will be held in Charleston, North Carolina.

Each PRSSA Chapter sends one official delegate to vote on bylaw changes and elect the next National Committee. All other chapter members are encouraged to attend to join training sessions, networking events, and workshops.

Texas State PRSSA is going to hold a floor vote to decide which of our members will be elected to be our official delegate for this year’s National Assembly. The delegate’s registration fees for the conference as well as the hotel stay will be covered by the assembly, however airfare to North Carolina will need to be provided by the delegate .

If you are interested in attending the National Assembly or being an official delegate, please contact Stephania Ortega at stephania@txstate.edu
